"For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see, Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be."

—TENNYSON

As the school term draws to a close, we of the graduating class realize that a very important phase of our growing-up has ended. We must now prepare for the future, because soon we will find ourselves being a part of that "big, mysterious world." However, all of us must feel that our fear of the "unknown" would be even more enormous had it not been for the careful guidance and background given to us by the teachers of this school.

The twenty-second edition of the Tricolor is respectfully and gratefully dedicated to these teachers.

There are many people who make a school important. First of all, are the scholars who bring honor to the school by academic excellence and scholarship. Secondly, are the athletes who win trophies and championships and make our school known athletically. Next, of course, are the students who work in the school to uphold a good school name. Behind all of these groups, however, are the "silent" people, our coaches and instructors, who are basically responsible for any honor or merit which may be bestowed upon the school. Let us stop now to thank them.

Let us also thank our Principal who has kept our school running smoothly and well. Every organization must have a capable leader, and we of S.C.H.S. are fortunate to have Mr. Innes as our counsellor and guide.

To those students who will be returning to this school again next year, I wish success in upholding the reputation of Strathcona. And to the Graduates, I wish good luck and happiness in future endeavors.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

CEC RACE
President

"Education has as its object the formation of character."
—Spencer

If the above were accepted as true, I would venture to say that Strathcona Composite High School is far advanced as a centre of education.

I am sure that within the hearts of those of us who this year depart from Strathcona, there thrives a sincere attitude of thankfulness to our school for all it has done to assist us in our uphill drive toward maturity of character. Yes, in the past three years we have grown up a good deal, and Strathcona has played her part well. It is possible that only in time will we be able to fully express our indebtedness but at this time of departing, we feel a special sense of gratitude.

This past school term was one which we can look back on with pride. Socially, academically, and athletically, Strathcona has once again exemplified her position as an outstanding school. We have every right to let our school spirit shine because Strathcona's 1959-1960 term was, indeed, prosperous.

Personally, it has been a wonderful privilege to have held the position of President during this past term. I have greatly enjoyed this unique experience. May I extend a sincere "Thank You" to Mr. Hougland and Mr. McNaught, our advisers, and to Mr. Innes, our Principal, for their prudent assistance in Student Union undertakings.

In closing, I wish success to all of my fellow-graduates in their future endeavors. And to the undergraduates, I pass on the challenge to maintain Strathcona's enviable standard.

May God be with you all.

Cec Race,
President.

STUDENTS' UNION

There are eight of them. They meet every week. They have considerable responsibility, and must undertake many dirty jobs. But they fulfil their duties well, and seem to enjoy the process. Who are they?

Well, the answer to this highly complex riddle is "the members of the Students' Union Executive."

EXECUTIVE

As it was felt that Grade Ten should be represented, one more member was added to the group this year: Freshman Grant Patrick was the first to fill the position of Grade Ten representative.

The Executive and its Activities Board are responsible for all extra-curricular functions at SCHS. They have to keep tab on the financial endeavors of all of the school's clubs, teams, yearplays, publications, and public service projects.

But life isn't all sad, for at least one executive member would like to move the meeting day from Wednesday to Tuesday, to lend a bit more Mardi Gras spirit to the proceedings.

VALEDICTORY

As we leave school, we find two choices: we may be more adventurous and search out life's challenges, or we may accept the type of shelter which school has given us until now.

We may easily find placid, routine, undemanding jobs. It will be easy to leave the work of the community to others. Soon we shall reach voting age, but it is not necessary to vote; one vote makes no difference to the results. Many adults now have this attitude: they look after only themselves, although their education, like ours, qualifies them to do more.

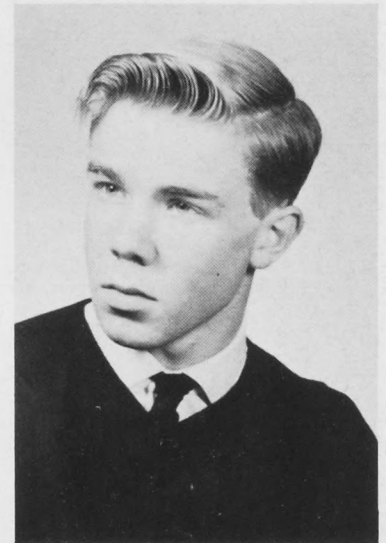

Of course, there is the alternative, to take part in life and seek its challenges. Before we can tackle this, though, we must realize that our present education has limitations, that we have touched only a few fringes of the great vastness of knowledge. Our responsibility is to try consciously to augment this background, whether through further formal education or in the real world around us.

The world we enter is full of problems which we shall have to live with or conquer. Problems such as the threat of communism and injustices and suffering in our own country affect us all, and we can no longer isolate ourselves from them.

Our high school years have been full of ups and downs, but I think we shall all find that the "ups" outnumber the "downs". We shall always remember our years at Scona, and, more particularly, the people, both staff and students, who make this school.

Previously, our school has been a shelter from many of the cares and responsibilities which we shall now have to face. We have reached a major dividing point from which diverge many ways, one for each of us. Most of us will be leaving our school, although not the friendships we have made here. Graduation thus means good-bye to much, but it is also the entrance to the wider world.

Success is within the capabilities of all of us. I wish it to all of you.

CLASS HISTORY

NEILA HINMAN
Class Historian

That long-dreamed-about graduation is finally here. Now we are the ones who will relive our past for a moment, remembering our successes and joyous activities in high school.

Strathcona Composite became the teaching home of a throng of new students, some from other parts of the city or province, and some from far away parts of the Dominion. From that very initiation day we were somehow united. Car-washing, book-carrying, brick-counting and shoe-shining seemed to combine us all in that fatiguing fun. We wondered if the years at Scona would be as enjoyable throughout. Our answer soon came as we rushed through the halls to classes, drama rehearsals, or club meetings. We had awards to work for, and homework to do. Our yearplays, "The Yellow Jacket" and "No More Peace", attracted people from all over the city to congregate in Scona's gym. But school isn't all hard work. We relaxed as we watched our champion track team performing along with our successful teams, or as we danced with our latest beau or belle at the Sweethearts' Swirl. Nineteen clubs provided the students with an opportunity to serve their school and meet their fellow students. As grade ten came to an end, we were left with a burning desire to return the next year, and have as much fun serving our school and developing our talents.

Grade eleven brings back to us memories of our not-so-successful school teams, our fun-for-all dances, and intriguing yearplay, "Tobias and the Angel". There were seventeen active clubs that year, many of which brought honor to the school. The ambitious chorus won the Alberta Provincial Award. This was the first time in twenty-three long years that a public high school had won this honor. While the Sadie Hawkin's Dance allowed us to let down our hair and dress informally, we were back in civilization for our second Sweethearts' Swirl. Twenty-eight of our graduates worked hard enough to obtain academic awards. What a year to remember!

Then our senior year came around. For the first time in our School's history, the frosh did not wait on the senior. Instead the seniors became hosts as Frosh Day changed from the hectic twenty-four hours of initiation to a week of welcome. Thus, the seniors shared with the Frosh their school spirit. Our school teams picked up this spirit and most of them placed in the top three positions. The drama club produced two worthwhile plays, "A Christmas Carol" and "Macbeth". This year was our last chance to show off our dance steps in Scona's gym. This year's noon shows provided entertainment during Friday noon hours. Tonight, sixteen graduates are eligible for academic awards. This year has been a busy year, not only because we have had the privilege of slaving over our books in hopes of passing those frightening exams, but because we were in charge of our school activities. When the exams are over there will be jubilation and tears, gladness for studying done all year and remorse for procrastination. We will realize what high school has meant to us. We will remember the work that our teachers and student body have done to make our high school years as profitable and enjoyable as they have been. But we must all go on to new things and whatever the future, we will all have our memories and our friendships.

SCHOOL CLUBS

During the 1959-1960 school term, many clubs functioned once again at SCHS. We will endeavor to summarize the purposes and activities of several of these active groups.

BOOSTER CLUB

The Booster Club is a fairly new organization which just began in the last school term. It is dedicated to the promotion of school spirit and school activities. Dick Sandilands acted as president this year.

RED CROSS

The Red Cross is primarily a service club whose purpose it is to serve both school and community. At Strathcona this year, under the leadership of Ian MacDonald, it has sponsored Sock Dances and supplied refreshments at Students' Union functions. The proceeds from these projects have gone into local and co-operative projects. The club, although small in membership, has one of the largest budgets in the school, and is self-sufficient.

PUBLIC SPEAKING AND DEBATING CLUB

The Public Speaking and Debating Club gives special emphasis to the development of personality through self-expression by participation in public speaking and debating. A series of debates are given throughout the year, and guest speakers are also invited. Bob Pounder, who won the 1960 Public Speaking Contest, was president this term.

SCIENCE CLUB

The main purposes of this very active group are: (1) To improve scholarship; (2) To increase the interest in science; (3) To aid others who are interested in science. This year the club held a "Science Fair" at which many projects were exhibited. Sophomore Ken Dubeta was president this year.

SCHOOL CHORUS

This club, though small in number, provided musical entertainment for many people during 1959-1960. It supplied interludes for "Christmas Carol", participated in the Rotary Carol festival, and sang at the Graduation exercises. Our thanks goes to Mr. Mayes for conducting this enthusiastic group.

MODELLING CLUB

The Modelling Club has had as its activities during the past term the presentation of two fashion shows for the public, and smaller fashion shows within the club. Mary Ann Manahan headed a very capable executive this year.

ART CLUB

The purpose of this club is to spread cultural interest throughout the school. Activities of the club included making club posters, art displays, and holding art sales. Gordon Young headed the club this year.

BLOTTER

"To help tie together different groups in this school by not keeping one above the other" is the aim of the fifteen member Blotter staff. They also try to foster school spirit and print the truth in the five editions printed every year. This year a Grade Eleven student, Louise Paxton, was editor.

I.S.C.F.

The I.S.C.F. Pioneer Club exists for the purpose of bringing the student world a satisfying and healthy outlook on the problems of life and living. In this interest the club showed films, had a hay ride, a gym party, an indoor rodeo, and a ski week end at Banff. Don Plewes worked as president to promote these activities.

CHESS AND CHECKER CLUB

Every noon hour this year found some members of the Chess and Checker Club fighting a battle of wits and brains. This club, as well as offering classes in chess and checkers, sponsored visits from Dr. Moser, and took part in an inter-scholastic competition which was won by Gary Grant and Brian Kendal of SCHS.

LIBRARY CLUB

Thirteen active members of the Library Club were an immense help to Miss Freebury, school librarian. This club met every two weeks with the aim of giving assistance to the school by acting as assistant librarians. Dick Parsons acted as president.

POLITICAL SCIENCE CLUB

The Political Science Club was a new club at SCHS this year. Its purpose was to study the science of government, and in this connection, speakers, debates, and forums highlighted the year. The Tricolor wishes the best of luck to Mr. Paetkau and his new club.

There were many other clubs that were active this year at Strathcona. The Tricolor staff wishes all such organizations success in their future endeavors.

THE FOSTER CHILD

Strathcona Composite High School has once again adopted an orphaned child through the Foster Parent's Plan. This year the child is a Korean boy, Kang Nam Koo. Through the support given to him, the boy will be able to continue his education and achieve ultimate rehabilitation.

Nam Koo is a clever boy and is now attending the second year of middle school (Junior High). Always at the head of his class, he is an excellent student and well-liked by all those who know him.

The Foster Child Committee, chosen by the Students' Union, corresponds with Kang Nam Koo and prepares packages and gifts for him. Comprising the committee are: Patti-Jo Laudermilk, Chairman; John Steele, Bill Hrychuk and Jeannette Taschuk.

DRAMATIC PRODUCTIONS

A Christmas Carol

Strathcona Composite High School students, under the direction of drama teacher, Mr. D. W. Pimm, produced two yearplays this year. The first, "A Christmas Carol", by Charles Dickens, was played in the school auditorium on November 26, 27, and 28, and in the Jubilee Auditorium on December 29 and 30.

This ambitious undertaking boasted a cast of well over fifty, and twelve sets, as well as innumerable crews and stage hands.

The play is set in nineteenth century London. The mood is placed when Fred wishes Scrooge a "Merry Christmas" and Scrooge replies with "Bah, humbug." Later that evening, Scrooge is visited by the ghost of his long dead partner Jacob Marley. Marley warns him of the coming of three spirits who will conduct him through the years of Christmas past, present and future. The ghosts arrive one at a time, and conduct him on a eery but sometimes joyous tour. At the close of the play, Scrooge emerges as a reformed and beloved old man.

Leading roles were played by Stan Egar (Scrooge), Sandra Sinclair, Loretta Mark, David Gibb, John Oberholtzer, Donald Rawlinson, and Franklyn Giffen. Special thanks goes to the School Chorus who sang Christmas music during the play.

MACBETH

A beat Macbeth? No, not really. Although Strathcona's second yearplay contained some elements of "beatnikism" it was still essentially a classical rendition of Shakespeare's famous tragedy, "Macbeth".

The play was produced on April seventh, eighth and ninth, with a cast of thirty-eight, and a crew of thirty drama class members. As an added feature, a score of physical education students (male), took part in authentic battle scenes.

Taking the leading roles were Director Mr. Pimm as Macbeth, and Susan McFarlane as his wife, Lady Macbeth. Other important parts were played by Stan Egar, Carol Rostrup, Mr. E. C. Mayes, David Gibb, and Franklyn Giffen. The witches were Margaret Suddards, Jayne Porteous, and Jean McFarland.

Ghostly effects were produced with lighting arrangements. Colored lights were used to a great extent for the first time. As the curtain went up, the whole stage was covered with mist, produced by the action of hot water on dry ice. Other details which added to the horror and effectiveness of the play were a blood-red set, fake blood on the swords and weapons, and actual fencing scenes.

Special mention goes to Nola Moar, Joyce Grant, and Claudia Allen who served as assistant directors. Thanks also goes to June Clark, Dawn Johnston, Jim Fowler, Jerry Nagy and Karen Loudon other crew hands.

FROSH WEEK

This year, a Frosh Welcome Week was held in place of the usual Frosh day.

The Houseleague played an important part in this new idea. The house captains and their helpers distributed beanies and pins to the Frosh on Tuesday, and assisted them with the Frosh program scheduled for Friday noon.

The program was very successful. Guest emcee was Bill Bogaart. The Green house's portion of the program was judged best; Blue house was second, Gold house third, and Maroon house fourth. Friday night all students—Seniors and Sophomores as well as Frosh—gathered in the main gym for a sock dance. A local radio announcer gave away records, and supplied the music. A good time was had by all.

SADIE HAWKINS DANCE

One of the most entertaining dances of the year was the Sadie Hawkins Dance. Following custom, gals asked their favorite fellows to a sock hop at the school. Music was supplied by CFRN radio station with Jerry Gibbons as M.C. Because the date was Friday, November 13 the gym was gaily decorated in an appropriate theme. Dice, balloons, black cats, and the traditional L'il Abner cartoons attracted everyone's eye. Mr. Gibbons proved to be an excellent M.C. and featured a great variety of music. Refreshments and checkroom service were supplied by the Red Cross Club.

PARENT, TEACHER, STUDENT NIGHT

The annual parent, teacher, student night sponsored by the Home and School Association and held this term on December 19, proved a profitable experience for many. The Art Club featured a successful display and the sale of student works. As well as this, Strathcona's School Chorus, other students and a single parent, entertained the audience with a variety of numbers. To complete the evening, records were played for dancing.

A gymnasium, transformed into a Valentine's ballroom, gave the several hundred attending students of the Sweethearts' Swirl a surprise and thrill as they proceeded down the receiving line, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Innes, Mr. and Mrs. McNaught, Mr. and Mrs. T. Patching, Cecil Race and Judy Brown, and into the gym. The semiformal, the main event of the winter season, was held on February 13.

A Tommy Banks band provided music for the dance.

Highlighting the evening was the crowning of Marcia Murray as Miss Scona 1960. Mr. Innes crowned Marcia by placing a delicate tiara on her head and Jane Watson, Miss Scona 1959, presented Marcia with the traditional cup. The evening of dancing was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present.

GRADUATION EXERCISES AND DANCE

Over three hundred graduates received their diplomas on May* 18th, at the Graduation exercises. Mr. McNaught chaired the gathering. Neila Hinman was Class Historian and Valedictorian was Doug McCalla. Dr. H. E. Rawlinson gave an interesting talk on the future.

The banquet and dance was held two days later at the Jubilee Auditorium, with parents, students, alumni, and teachers in attendance. The toast to the graduating class was given by Robert Allin and replied to by Jeannette Taschuk. The toast to the school was made by Barbara Andersen and replied to by Mr. Innes. Jack Klinck made the toast to the parents and Dr. O. Rostrup replied. Len Whiteley and his orchestra provided music for the dance which followed the banquet.

COUNCIL of PRESIDENTS and VICE-PRESIDENTS

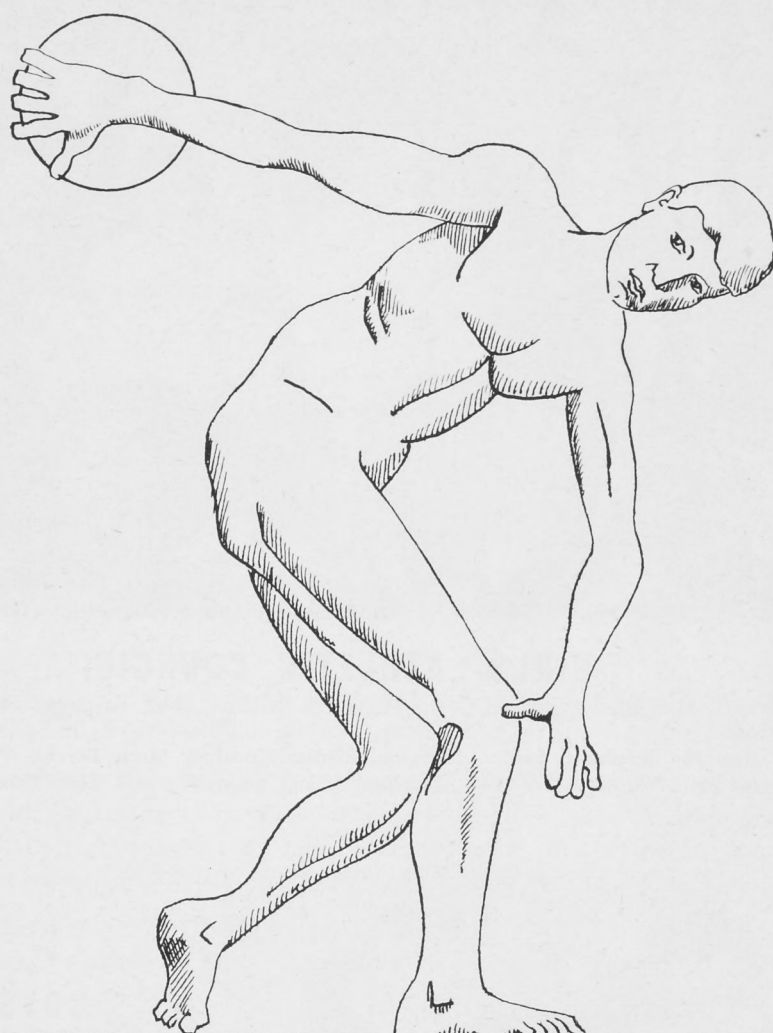

The occasion is a summit conference in Strathcona's library. Gathered to discuss weighty matters are the members of the Council of Students' Union Presidents and Vice-Presidents. Seated are Dianne Atwood, vice-president, SCHS, and Council secretary; Maxie Runions, vice-president, BDCHS, and Council chairman; Mr. Innes, adviser; Ann Gardiner, VCHS and Susan Peers, RSCHS, both vice-presidents. Standing are Don Harper, president, BDCHS; Ken Dewar, vice-president, ECHS; Ian Pitfield, president, RSCHS, and Council vice-chairman; and presidents Cec Race, SCHS, Harry Hiller, VCHS, and Bernie Bradley, ECHS.

The Council's purpose is to coordinate inter-school activities, to attempt to unify Students' Union policies within the city, and to allow the SU heads to exchange ideas and talk shop. It frequently makes recommendations to the School Board and to the high school administrations on matters of student endeavor. The group is represented on the Edmonton Teen Council.

At its monthly meetings at various composite high schools, the Council has this year pondered upon such items as a scoreboard for Coronation Park, the effectiveness of its new-this-year Frosh Welcome Week, and the success of charitable drives in high schools.

GIRLS' HOUSELEAGUE

Girls' Athletic Council

New at Strathcona this year was the Girls' Athletic Council, a hard working group that was responsible for the successful co-ordination of all girls' athletic activities.

The Council includes all house captains and secretaries and is ably guided by Miss Silk.

This year, Linda Clute, Council president, was assisted by vice-president Marcia Murray. Secretarial duties were attended to by Beth Wilson.

The smooth operation of all girls' athletic activities has been extremely dependent on this hard-working Council.

The basketball season, this year, was very successful. The Gold House captured the Junior Girls' title, while the Maroon House received the Senior laurels.

With the helpful co-operation of the teachers and officials, the annual Girls' Volleyball Round Robin Tournament got off to a great start.

In the Senior division, the Blue House won top honors, and was followed by the Gold, Maroon and Green Houses. The Gold House won the Junior division. All in all, the tournament was a big success and a vote of thanks goes to all those girls who supported their houses.

The final event in Girls' Houseleague this term was Track and Field, and as the Tricolor went to press, the girls had begun to train.

BOYS' HOUSELEAGUE

This year the Boys' Houseleague was very active, under the leadership of John Byrne, Jack Klinck, Gordon Hostland and Stan Stinchcombe.

The Basketball season was very successful. The results of the scheduled games were: Grade Ten winner—Gold House; Grade Eleven winner—Gold House and the Grade Twelve winner—Maroon House.

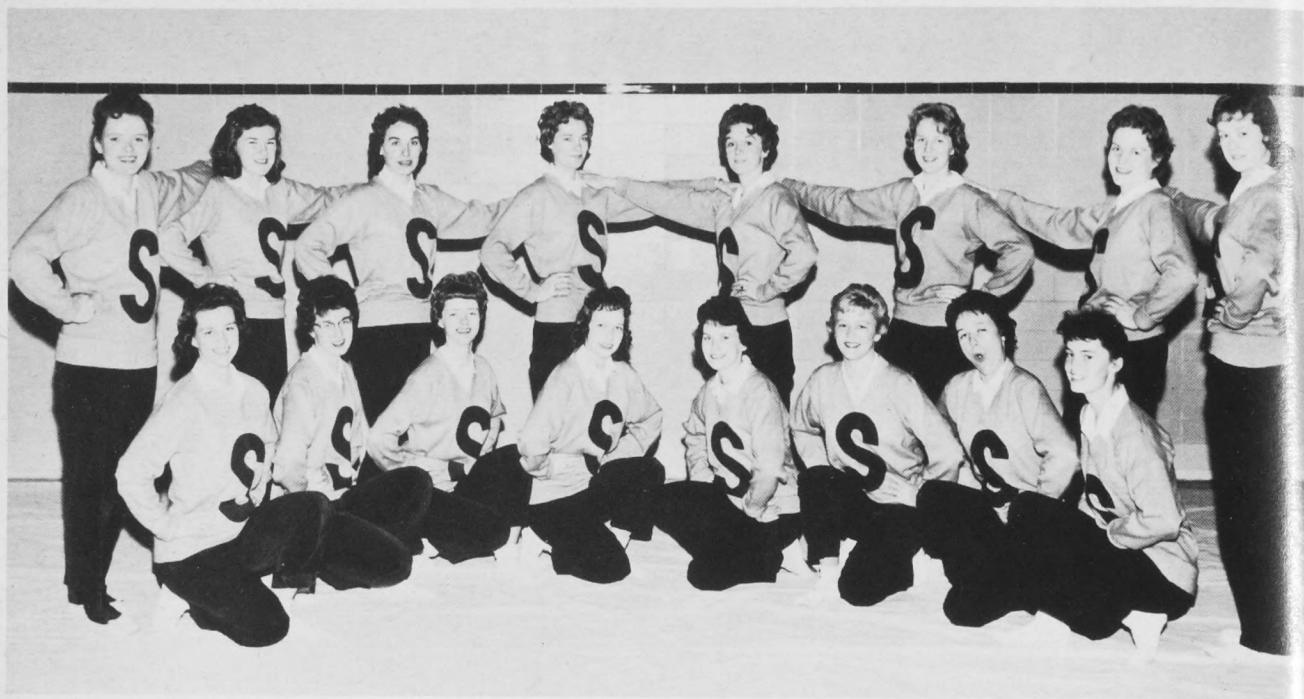

The boys had a lot of fun playing Volleyball and in a number of games, the Grade Ten team from the Gold House topped the other Houses to win first place. The Green House captured the Grade Eleven title, and the Blue House won the Grade Twelve honors.

In addition to Basketball and Volleyball, the boys also participated in Track and Field activities, and an organized Fastball league.

CURLING

Interest and activity in curling circles was once again stimulated in the school this year. Strathcona entered four teams in the fourteen team inter-school league at the Edmonton Curling Club. Richard Price and his rink with a regular league record of eleven wins and two loses, emerged as runner-up for the Frank Wolfe Trophy. The same quartet entered the Taylor and Pearson playdowns for the right to represent Northern Alberta in the provincial playoffs. However, Price went down to the Tommy Kroeger rink of Stettler which went on to become the Dominion Champions.

In the local sixteen team Balmoral league, Bob Deakin captured the first event with the second going to Mike Jones.

Mr. C. Climenhaga did a commendable job as club adviser and our thanks go to him.

In the four remaining games the team slipped slightly, but finished with a very respectable record of three wins and three losses.

The squad displayed a fine team spirit in all games and words of thanks go to Mr. P. Melnychuk and M. J. Gilfillan for the excellent coaching job. Team captains were Stan Stinchcombe and Ken Neilson.

This year the senior loop operated out of Coronation Park, the only floodlit high school stadium in Canada.

WILSON, the squad entered the preliminary meet against Victoria. The boys lost to a strong team 70-61, but on the strength of the girls' convincing 82-49 win, SCHS captured the aggregate. ## OF CRUELTY

by John Steele

Slaves of Pharoah—
Black from the sun,
Choked from the dust,
Raw from the whip.
Sickened,
Weary,
Death, for a mountain of stone.

Servants to Rome—
Bow down to Caesar.
Draw Nero's bath,
Suffer Phoenicia's sword
Gladiator?
Nubian?
Nothing?

Blacks of the South coast—
Bread of the slave runner.
Shackled, Abused.
What is your back worth?
—a keg of rum?
—a piece of silver?
And from the rabble,
What have we to say of Modern Man?

THE CONFIDENCE

by Judith Gunning

He turned to me,
Singling me out from the crowd,
Speaking low,
Of some trivial matter I suppose,
I really don't remember.
I only know
That he looked deep into my eyes,
Never smiling,
And for the moment I felt
Included in his world.

HER

by Darlene Hasset

She sat at her desk so prime and straight
Her short hair curled about her small face.
(She wore it like everyone else).
And she wore a blue sweater
Atop a black skirt,
Around her wrist clanked big silver bracelets.
(She dressed the same as the rest).
Black squash heeled shoes were on her feet.
(They were just like Mary's and Jane's and Anne's).
She always carried her school notes on a clip board.
(Because no one used anything else).
And she wore Tommy's ring on a chain about her neck,
It showed that she went steady;
(Everyone went steady).
You ask me who she is?
Well I'll tell you.
She's Nobody, yet everyone.
She's the girl standing over there,
The one in the middle of the crowd,
She does everything with everyone
Because she is everyone,
And yet,
She's no one at all.

FIRST PRIZE

SCAPEGOAT FOR INSECURITY

Linda Scott

In the twentieth century there is a fearful, desperate search being carried on every day, by every living person—the search for security. The unreal, far-fetched quality of life today is causing fear and bewilderment throughout the world. Conformity is a method of combatting this fear that is actually ignorance. Life seems to be forging ever and ever forward, and to what goal? To conform is to rate majority approval and therefore to achieve security.

Youth affords the most feasible breeding place for conformity. In a time of confusion, uncertainty, and unstable values, conformation yields secure relationships and serves to eliminate self-consciousness, the great hindrance and trial of the young. There is little real congruity of thought or effort in this conformation, merely a harmony and semblance of desire. However, conformity is not lacking in factors which render it detrimental to society as a whole. As easily as it may produce worthy efforts, so may it yield itself to today's social problems.

We are, today, in the throes of battle against socialism, nationalism, communism, anti-semitism, and segregation, to mention but a few prevalent social diseases. Only through total conformity of ideas, effort, and will, may these malignancies be minimized. Total abolishment of such sources of conflict is unlikely and undesirable. It would make carving a peaceful society a simple task. Life would soon become purposeless, and although there often seems to be no apparent aim to life, it is there, to be sought, discovered, and rediscovered by each and every individual.

Conformity, therefore, has its limits. These are set by the will of the people, controlled by the want of the people, and destroyed by the war of the people, only to again be established, that they might remain the bounds of society and its ever-present conflicts.

Within the limits of conformation, every person must discover his own place and adhere to the regulations of his self-imposed bounds. In this way, everyone contributes to society through conformation—the conformation to his own morals and ideals.

Thus, security is attained—security and assurance in knowing that man is being true to himself and therefore true to his fellow man.

ESSAY CONTEST—SECOND PRIZE

“FAIR LADY” FEVER

by Bob Pounder

Did you try to get tickets for “My Fair Lady” when the rush was on? I hope not. People who set out deliberately looking for trouble get no sympathy from me.

My family was planning a trip to New York about three years ago, at the height of “Fair Lady” fever. We blundered headlong into the foray by writing a disgustingly polite letter, enclosed in which was payment for three seats for any day in July, matinee or evening. The letter was promptly returned, along with a curt message which implied that we, of the masses, were utter fools to imagine for a minute that tickets would be sent to us!

Nevertheless, our plebeian expedition arrived on a bright July day in mid-town Manhattan; and, after checking in at our hotel, set out on a long walk for purposes of orientation. This was a mistake. Before long, we found ourselves across the street from the Mark Hellinger theater, where “My Fair Lady” was holding forth. The block buzzed with the high-pitched screams of middle-aged women of the Ry-Krisp and henna rinse variety who were trying to force their way through the Gates of Paradise: the Saturday matinee was about to begin. Like lambs to the slaughter, we strolled across the street toward the ear-splitting roar just as a pompous and rather bored-looking man forced his way to the ticket window and put up a sign reading “This Performance Completely Sold Out.” A howl went up which chilled our blood, but the mob finally began to claw its way around us in a retreat to Shrafft’s, or the Rainbow Room, depending on Southern Baptist or agnostic leanings.

As we stood gasping in the summer heat beside the theater, a remarkably well-dressed gentleman strode up to my father and whispered, “Got three orchestra seats. You can have ’em for forty-five dollars.”

Now, everyone knows that seeing “My Fair Lady” is a once-in-a-lifetime event; and no one, least of all my Dad, would miss a chance to do so, even for fifteen dollars a seat. So, about five minutes later, we found ourselves ensconced in the plush opulence of Row G, Center section, as the orchestra swung into the overture.

The show, with Rex Harrison and Julie Andrews, was perfect in every detail, of course, but hardly worth the terrific uproar into which North America was plunged upon its arrival on Broadway. If as many people were as excited about major world problems such as disease, famine and the attainment of international peace, we really might get somewhere, mightn’t we? That rain in Spain will always remain.

ESSAY CONTEST—THIRD PRIZE

YOUTH—MEET GOD!

by Gordon Burch

In contemporary society, materialistic standards, the absence of a true moral and ethical sense, and the ever-increasing pace of life leave youth in dilemma. Some, consequently, turn to crime and delinquency, and the tragic result is a broken life and a "smear" upon teenagers as a whole. A few, seeking the path of least resistance, assume an attitude of passive indifference to family, community, and the world. Nevertheless, there are those young people today earnestly and diligently seeking a better way, an enlightened path of life. Is there a better way, and if so, where is it to be found?

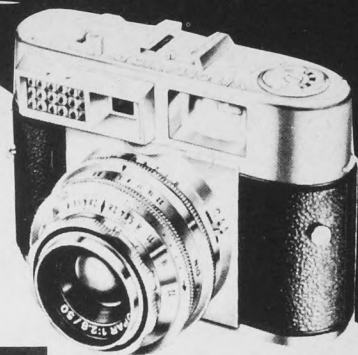

I believe that Christianity is the only satisfactory answer to youth's problems. Christianity makes available to all a life more rewarding, more challenging, and more purposeful than one based on any other philosophy or way of thinking. Furthermore, Christianity is most certainly vindicated by modern science and technology. The bold Saviour Christ and the infinitely powerful and majestic God one meets in science are not easily reconciled with the meek and mild Jesus of Sunday School classes and the Tender Father, however, and the picture is further complicated by misinterpretations of the Holy Scriptures. Diligent searching of the truth will clear the mist, though, and the strong correlation between Christianity and science becomes apparent.

Where may proof of this correlation be found? For the layman, it is not an easy task, and it is best to turn to substantiating material written by scientists themselves. The fine book recently published and edited by John Monsma, entitled The Evidence of God In An Expanding Universe, is a wonderful source of knowledge in this regard. Forty American scientists give their affirmative views on religion, and specifically on Christianity. John Cleveland Cothan, a leading mathematician and chemist, makes a significant assertion concerning the age - old question of creation and origin. "Can any informed and reasoning intellect possibly believe that insensible and mindless matter just chanced to originate itself, then impose a system of organization upon itself."

The amazing phenomena that water expands below four degrees centigrade to permit the survival of life in natural waters is pointed to as one of God's marvellous works of creation by Frank Allin, a biophysicist. All forty scientists assert vigorously that the world contains infinite design and plan, and insist that such divine majesty must have a Divine Creator. To deny such would be analogous to stating that a complex machine just happens to exist, that no intellect was behind its planning and construction. Peter W. Stoner, astronomer, attacks the concept that the Bible is inaccurate and unreliable in any material aspects. He points out that science has set tentative dates and ages for many things, including the ages of meteorites, the age of the earth, moon, sun, and other members of this galaxy and universe, and the time required to develop the various elements, their divisions and quantities. From this information, a truly amazing fact becomes evident. All these ages have been approximated at six billion years. This is so outstanding that many scientists speak of the day of creation at the hand of Almighty God in terms of some very approximate date. These are but a few of the facts presented in the book, and the forty scientists, but a few of many believing people, people in all walks of life. New worlds of understanding between science and Christian belief are being opened. Lord Kelvin, one of the world's foremost physicists, states with conviction, "If you think strongly enough, you will be forced by science to believe in God."

And so it is that youth has an undeniable basis for belief in God. Our greatest challenge is in the successful application of this belief and faith in making for a more viruous and rewarding life in a world bettered by Christian ideals and Christian lives.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK

Robin Higham

Synopsis: In an old fishing village in Spain, Jose di Costa is a respected and loved fisherman. He has just returned from a long trip and as the story opens, is telling a group of his friends that he has discovered a lost treasure. Particularly enthralled is a young seaman Roberto.

Roberto again broke in on the other's thoughts. "You must have a boat full of the stuff then, Jose."

Roberto's voice had acquired a smoothness not heard in the village since Rafael Hernandez last weighed anchor and sailed from their bay to loot the King of Spain's treasure ships.

"No," answered Jose, "I didn't even touch it."

"You what?" Roberto couldn't believe his ears.

"I didn't touch it," he repeated, "you all know about the curse that falls upon those who even search for Rafael's famous treasure. You remember how that expedition from America was destroyed by the terrible earthquake last summer and the one from France the year before. And what about your father Roberto, Alfonso Loredó? Remember how he was going to spend a whole summer searching for the treasure and then he drowned in the sea . . . the best swimmer in our village and he drowned in the sea. No sir, that treasure is responsible for too much trouble already. It's cursed!"

Roberto's eyes glinted in the firelight as the older men reluctantly nodded their agreement to Jose's argument.

"Ah!" Roberto scoffed, "Everyone is so afraid of earthquakes. That's why our village is so small, nobody wants to live here just because we have a few little earthquakes."

Roberto licked his lips and reached for Jose's wine bottle. The others paid no attention as the young fisherman tipped its bottom towards the full moon now rising over the quiet bay.

A few minutes after Jose's lamp finally burned itself out, a lean and crouched figure whisked down the hillside to the odd collection of boats huddled on the moonlit beach. The man shoved one of the smallest boats into the chilly water. He waded out knee-deep before climbing in and starting to row toward the cliffs on the opposite side of the bay.

Jose lay on his bed staring at the low ceiling of the little cottage. He had slept poorly that night and now the sun was already lighting up the bedroom. He got up and gazed across the water just as he had done for seventy years.

"What a calm day," he thought, "The fish should be easy to catch in these waters."

Jose hadn't even thought of the treasure until his eyes focussed on the cliffs across the bay, that he thought he knew so well. Then something caught his eye. It was a small boat. It was merely a spot on the water but Jose had seen enough fishing boats in his day to be able to tell one at twice the distance.

"This is strange," he thought, "I have always been the first one out to fish in the mornings. I wonder who that is? Not Raman or Julio, they are both repairing their nets. It's not Eduardo's boat and not Roberto surely, that lazy good for nothing . . . Roberto!"

Jose's heart almost stopped.

"It is Roberto and he isn't fishing, he's after the treasure, he headed straight for the cliffs."

Jose ran from his house and down the hill to Miguel's. Miguel was already at his door and staring across the bay.

"Miguel. Miguel. Who is it? Is it Roberto?"

"Yes, Jose, it is Roberto and it's much too late to stop him now, he must have been rowing all night."

"But he'll be killed, Miguel. He's going for the treasure."

Jose's shouts soon brought the rest of the fishermen and their families. Soon, the whole hilltop was covered with little groups of people watching the slow advancement of Roberto's boat toward the cliffs. They stood quietly, wrapped in shawls and blankets against the cold morning. No one said anything when he finally disappeared through the hole. They waited with stubborn fisherman's patience. The tide reached its ebb at about ten o'clock and as always, it started back again half an hour later. Nobody left the hillside or even looked away from the cliff. Jose could see the black patch on the cliff growing smaller and smaller with each wave that splashed against its side. As he watched through his telescope, he wondered what Roberto would do with his treasure. Would he share it with the people who had raised him since his father's death or maybe even with the whole village? Jose was suddenly ashamed of his thoughts. A curse is a curse he told himself. He had lived with the sea too long and he knew that nobody would ever use that treasure . . . it was meant for the King of Spain. Jose raised the glass to his eyes once again, just in time to see Roberto's boat nose its way out of the cliff. The others saw him too and they let out a tremendous cheer. They yelled and danced and threw their hats in the air as if they were watching a bullfight in Madrid.

Then, suddenly, Jose had a queer feeling. It was as if the ground was moving. Then it came again. The villagers knew what it was just as well as Jose.

"Quake!" someone screamed.

The land tossed and heaved. It shook and roared and split into a million pieces. The sea below turned black and threw itself against the shore as if bragging about its terrible temper. When the tempest finally subsided and the dust began to settle, the villagers picked themselves up off the ground and stared once more across the bay.

There was no Roberto to be seen now, nor even a cliff. In place of it was a pile of rock and rubble strewn carelessly in the black ocean. The villagers crossed themselves and started back to rebuild their village.

Jose went fishing.

SHORT STORY—SECOND PRIZE

DEATH'S BARRIER

by Hugh Robertson

The skipper stood with his legs wide apart, searching the horizon with his eyes. Then, over to the left he saw it. The silvery waves were breaking rhythmically across the coral reef. Beyond, the shimmering sands of the island lay motionlessly in the brilliant sun.

Farther along the coast, high on a cliff, overlooking the sea, stood a house. Suddenly a single figure emerged from the cottage and turned to watch the tiny ship come to a landing. It had been many years since a visitor had come to the island. In all of his sixteen years as minister and missionary on Languad, Allen Meadows had had only a few white men as his guests. Slowly he made his way down to the pier to greet the skipper. After leaving a few orders for the crew, the skipper turned to meet the missionary.

"Good to be on dry land again," he said. "We've been on the sea for a fortnight now. The rainy season always makes the going pretty rough."

The two chatted amiably for a moment then started slowly up to the house, stopping briefly at the top of the hill to rest and admire the view. The cottage lay some twenty feet back from the edge of the slope.

"You probably have one of the most beautiful views on the island," said the skipper. "How did you happen to choose this particular spot?"

The missionary slowed his steps and turned to look at the vast panorama spread out below.

"When I first came to this island, I heard a fascinating legend which immediately aroused my interest. It sounds strange I know, but at heart I am a sentimentalist. The story went something like this."

"Many years ago a young native girl and a boy, from a neighboring tribe, found themselves in love. The tribes to which each belonged, however, were bitter and long-standing enemies. Well, the story ends with such tragedy that it lingers in these islands yet. The girl, so legend has it, leapt to her death from this very spot. There is an interesting modern version to this story if you would care to hear it sometime."

The men continued on their way up to the cabin. Supper was served to them by a silent native girl. She was by any standard, very beautiful. Her long black hair was done in the native style and tied with a bright red ribbon. The two men continued their meal in silence with only an occasional remark from the skipper. With dinner over and the heat of the day slowly dying, the two men retired to the lawn in front of the cottage to watch the evening settle over the surrounding islands. A lone bird winged its way slowly off into the distance, its feathers a brilliant hue with the setting sun. For a time the white men sat looking at the scene spread out before them, then the skipper turned to his companion.

"I would be interested in hearing the modern sequel to our tragic legend," he said.

The missionary sat silently and then began his tale.

"It is not a happy story but there is a certain beauty in such a true and simple love as this was. She came from the south. Her people were gone and she had come to live in Languao with her relatives. This is a common practise with these people. The families are very closely knit. At any rate, she soon came to love the island and more particularly, a young sailor. He was of the whaling boats which periodically made their stops among the islands. Maliea, for so she was called, was just a young girl in her teens at the time. Whether or not the sailor was serious was never known for sure. The people of the island were very harsh in their feelings toward him after it was all over. Of course, they could see it coming; all except Maliea. One night she awoke to find him gone. Before I continue you must understand that it was not his desire to hurt her that made him act as he did, but rather a wandering spirit that would not let him settle down. Meliea waited for him for two long years. Her nights must have been very lonely for one day, not long before I came, her body was washed ashore, beaten and battered by the sea. She had left home to come up to this spot to live, and in the end, to die. It was her daughter you saw in the cottage tonight."

The missionary stopped then to gaze across the endless stretches of the sea. The sun had sunk and dusk prevailed. He turned to his companion and was startled to see tears in his eyes. He knew his story was sad, but this was a man of the sea and had lived long and hard. He couldn't understand . . . and then he knew. And as the truth dawned upon him the man spoke.

"You told the story well, but you failed to understand the reason for the break in the seemingly perfect love. Just as the legend of old, where the one warrior could not bind himself to the girl because of the differences of their people, neither was it possible for us. Our lives could not be one for we were different people with many barriers between ourselves and our happiness. I always meant to come back to see her. How could I have known. Why, oh why . . ."

His voice broke and he held his head in his hands. All the renewed sorrow and grief swept through him as he sat at the spot where she died.

Dusk had fallen as the missionary watched the bulky figure descend to the beach below. Soon complete darkness had fallen and the figure could no longer be seen at all. The missionary rose from his chair and slowly returned to the cottage. His mind was filled with many sad thoughts as he opened the door of the house. He glanced back suddenly as he heard a rustle from the shrubbery a few feet from where he stood. He couldn't be sure but he thought he saw the glimmer of long black hair tied with a bright red ribbon.

FLIGHT OF FEAR

by Emmanuel Mirth

Synopsis

Istvan Szabo is a Hungarian refugee who fled from the terror of the Russians in an effort to escape to Austria. In doing so, he has abandoned his father, leaving him to be shot or imprisoned by the communist mercenaries. Yet, it must not be thought that the Magyar has absolutely no conscience for only wild panic in the face of disaster led him to ignore the fate of his father. Unfortunately, however, his desire to escape surpasses the warnings of his conscience as he draws nearer to freedom. At the moment, he stands in a barn near the vast marsh that spans the Austria-Hungary border.

He rose and approached the barn door. Dusk had already fallen on the uncut wheat in the fields. Dark shadows danced among the trees that lined the ravine beyond the house. A prairie hound howled plaintively in the distance, heralding the ascension of night. It was getting colder, for Istvan's breath condensed as soon as it touched the air.

"It is time," he thought. "Now, as long as the soldiers remain on the regular patrol routes, I should reach the marshlands quickly and without mishap."

With that in mind he stole across the farmyard and slipped into the dry bed of the creek. He trotted along the trail for several minutes, noticing, as he went, that there were a great many footprints along the way. "Others have evidently used the ravine as an escape route," he supposed. "I hope the soldiers haven't discovered the trail."

Suddenly, as if the very thought had conjured up its own substance, Istvan heard the steady beat of hobnailed boots pounding on the hard ground.

"Russians!" he shuddered, "And they're close, too!" He dove into the bush and flattened himself against the earth. At the same moment, three soldiers rounded the bend. They stopped near the spot Istvan had occupied the second before.

"Wait! Did you hear anything?" demanded one of the Soviets.

"Yes, I think I heard something rustling in the trees over there," answered another as he started moving towards Istvan.

"Ah, you must be hearing things again," retorted a third. "I heard nothing. Let's move on."

"But what if . . ."

"Never mind. It was probably just a rabbit. You can stay if you like, but I'm going ahead."

The first two Soviets hesitated, shrugged their shoulders, and followed the third.

Istvan exhaled the air that was stabbing at his lungs. He hadn't breathed once from the time he first heard their approach, and his heart fluttered in his throat like a moth tangled in a spider's web.

"That was close!" He shuddered, as he thought of what almost happened. "Well," he decided, "At least I know that the Russians haven't discovered the trail. Now I'll have to detour across the fields to avoid meeting another patrol. It is unfortunate that the narrowest stretch of marshland is at the mouth of the ravine. It will be cold crossing the wider expanse."

Yet, Istvan was not really disturbed by that added burden. He was familiar with the lay of the swamp, and could quickly overcome the additional natural barrier. No, it wasn't the ice and the cold that frightened him; it was something altogether apart from nature. He had heard of the hundreds of refugees who had been shot at sight while cropping their way through the reeds and water. He had heard of the many forty-foot towers that hovered, gleaming with searchlights and bristling with machine guns, over each likely passage in the marsh. These were the things that Istvan dread.

While the memories passed through Istvan's mind, he sat in his vantage behind a mask of leafless trees, and scanned the prairie. Deciding that all was clear, he darted across the stubble in the direction of the shadowy marshlands.

It took him less than ten minutes to reach the shore, a distance which he reckoned to be almost two kilometers. From where he stood, Istvan could see that the swamp stretched at least another fifteen kilometers to the west, for the opposite shore was obscured by the natural curvature of the earth.

"How easy it would be for one to become lost in this maze of reeds," he mused. "Let me see, now. Where are the Russian towers?" He searched the black horizon for the flowing white shafts that denoted searchlights. "Ah yes, there they are, I should pass safely between them before dawn, if I hurry."

He stepped into the water, shattering the thin film of ice that lay on top, and stood motionless for a moment as he accustomed his feet to the stinging cold. "I must try to follow the shallow regions," he noted. For the cold is extremely bitter."

Then he strode forward, into the swamp. For hours he stalked on through the frigid water, over tiny islands of mud, and between the knife-edged clumps of reeds. His face, hands, and feet throbbed with an excruciating pain that stole his breath and numbed his senses. Still, on he plodded, until his feet ached no more; on and on, into the heart of the marshland.

Istvan was almost upon the Soviet towers when at last he stopped. His mind cleared, and the course he had set flashed before his eyes. He noticed once more the trails left by refugees that had gone before him. The reeds to his right and left were broken and trampled. Footprints appeared in the mud wherever the earth jutted through the water's surface.

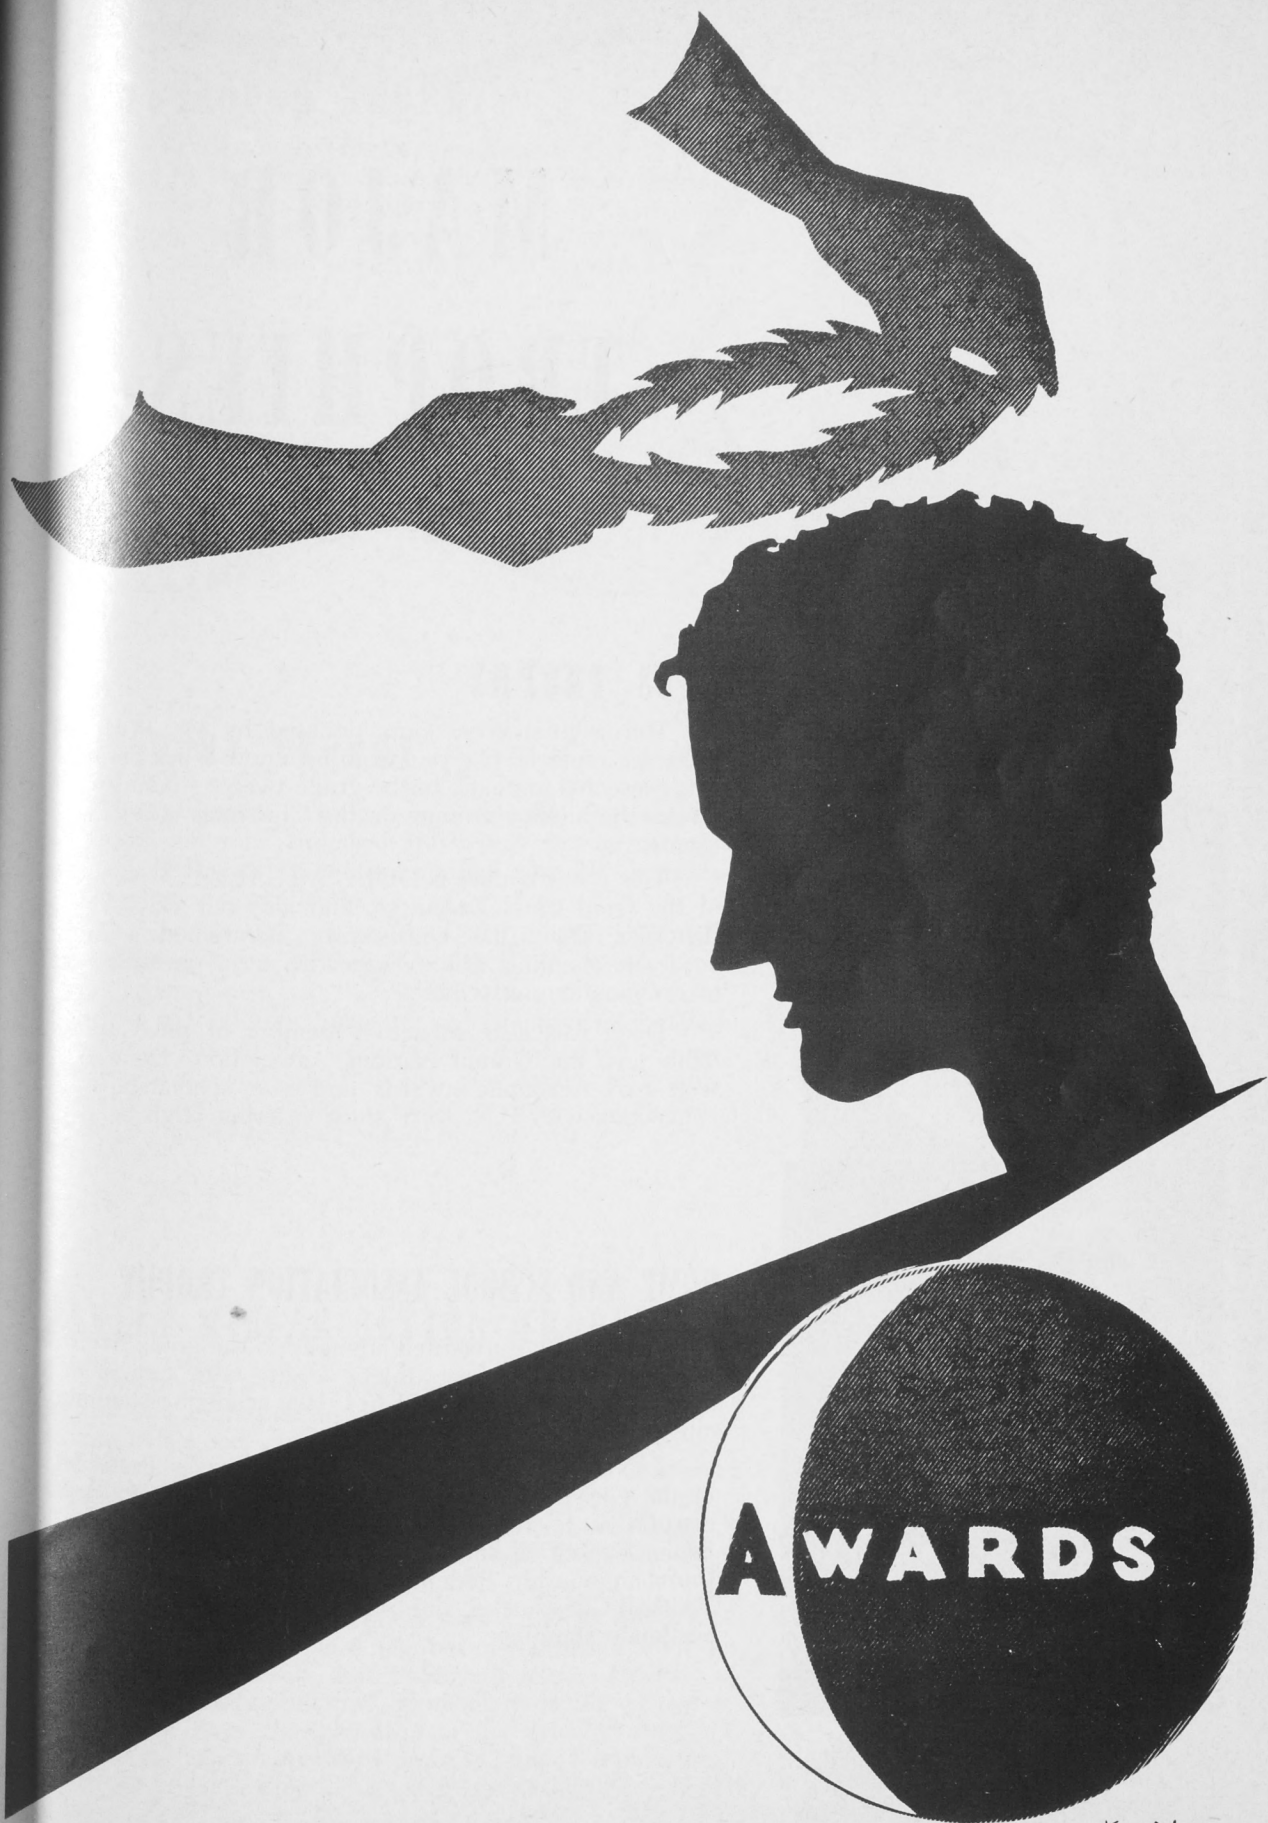

Suddenly, something moved across a clearing directly ahead of Istvan.

"Russians!" he thought again. "Now all is lost!" But he was wrong this time, for the quaking voice of another refugee hailed him.

"Help! Help us! We are lost in this cursed swamp!"

Behind the speaker stood four more shivering hulks. Istvan had heard, once, that some persons

THANKS EVERYBODY

Each year the success of a Yearbook depends, to a certain extent, on the financial backing it receives from local business firms, for without this support, the editors would be severely limited.

This year we have again been able to obtain the necessary assistance.

We ask the students of Strathcona Composite High School to help us show our gratitude to our advertisers by supporting them.

Special thanks go to the following people who helped us with the advertising section:

Advertising Secretary, Gloria Williams; Judy Barford, Ruth Bowie, Lynn Card, Arleen Dawe, Shauna Dorskind, Hanna Kwirant, Marilyn McCoy, Lynn Sinclair, Faye Sparks and Rod Wilson.

LORNA DOWNEY
Advertising Manager

Traditions that live

Strong and honourable traditions provide the foundation of firm training in leadership expressed today in the motto of the three Canadian Services Colleges: Truth-Duty-Valour.

Allied to the prestige of the past is advanced education at university level given by these colleges to the officer-cadets of Canada's armed forces. Carefully selected high school graduates are trained for challenging professional careers as officers in the Navy, Army or Air force, for the responsibility of holding the Queen's Commission.

to serve the Future

Through the Regular Officer Training Plan (ROTP) the Department of National Defence will sponsor a limited number of qualified High School graduates to obtain a university education, either at the Canadian Services Colleges or at designated Canadian universities. Full details of this financial assistance can be obtained without obligation from your nearest Armed Forces Recruiting Centre, or by mailing this coupon now.

*Closing date for candidates applying for 1960 fall classes is 1 July 1960*.

FACTS THAT SPELL "OPPORTUNITY" FOR AMBITIOUS YOUNG MEN

The "Royal" is one of the largest banks in North America. More than 960 branches are in operation and new ones are being opened all the time, resulting in promotions for young Royal Bankers.

"Influence" plays no part in advancement at the Royal Bank. Senior officers from the Chairman and President on down started as juniors in small branches and advanced on merit alone.

For young men interested in gaining international banking experience, the Royal Bank has over 90 branches abroad—in New York, London, Paris, the Caribbean area and South America.

We have generous pension plans that compare with the best, as well as group, health and hospital insurance, at low cost to employees.

EATON'S OF CANADA "The Store for Young Canada"

The younger generation—versatile and fun-loving—is an important cross section of the population. Eager to learn, eager to earn, young people of today are eager, also, to assume adulthood and to take their place as worthy citizens in a fast-moving world.

Yes, young people today are bright and alert and they show wisdom in their shopping habits when they head for EATON'S of CANADA, "The Store for Young Canada". They know that EATON'S caters to their crowd — with togs that are at once "tops" in styling, "tops" in quality, "tops" in serviceability; And they know that EATON prices are easy on the pocketbook! For them, as for their elders, "IT PAYS TO SHOP AT EATON'S!"

became lost and froze in the swamp while fleeing to Austria; and he realized that he was expected to assist these lost countrymen.

His mind raced into action. "This I didn't anticipate," he thought. "I can't take these people with me. A group so large would easily be spotted by the soldiers in their towers. We will be shot to death on sight! If I help these lost refugees, I shall never see freedom! Why should I die for some fools I have never seen before? It is their fault if they are lost!" He turned and fled in a fit of anger and panic. "I must escape!" he cried as he reeled past the hapless fugitives.

Then the nagging voice that had persisted in Istvan's mind as he had lain on the straw in the old barn reappeared. "You have killed your father!" it screamed, "Now will you murder again?"

"No! No!" Istvan exclaimed. The cold and the fury of his conscience tore at his sanity. He stumbled blindly towards the tower.

A broad yellow beam swung to meet his tormented cries. It was too late to turn. A sharp order was instantly succeeded by the rattle of machine-gun fire. Searing pain ripped through his body, flinging him down. Only the image of his father's face persevered, as the darkness of night yielded to the absolute blackness of unconsciousness.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

As the completion of the Tricolor draws near, there are many people who we would like to thank. First and foremost, of course, is Mr. Smith, the Tricolor sponsor. Without his help none of this book would have been possible.

Secondly, may we thank Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Barr, Mrs. McCrae and Miss Simmons for their constant assistance. We are also indebted to Mr. Miller for all his help with the yearbook pictures.

Thirdly, may we thank all those students who have not belonged to the Staff, but have worked hard to make the yearbook what it is. May we refer specifically to Shauna Dorskind, Garth Nielson, Jean Zaharichuk and Judy Barford.

Without the help of these people the 1959-60 Tricolor would not have been published.
